

The New World Disorder: Geopolitics, Economics & the Future of Business

Latest Global Keynote Presentation

We are no longer living through temporary turbulence. Instead, we are entering a structural shift in global power, economics and strategic influence. In The New World Disorder, Political Analyst and Global Strategist Daniel Silke explores the forces reshaping the international system: an unpredictable USA, rising populism & geopolitical risk, great power rivalry, economic fragmentation, trade realignment, currency volatility, technological competition, and the growing intersection between politics and corporate strategy. This keynote provides delegates with clarity in complexity - presented in an engaging and entertaining style. Book now for your next conference or corporate event.

Book Now!

Daniel Silke

Political Economy Analyst
& Global Strategist

Risk & Resilience 2026: Navigating the Global Economy amidst Rising Political Volatility

Latest 2026 Conference Presentation

The world is shifting from temporary disruption to a new and more volatile reality. The old rules of global trade and diplomatic co-operation are being replaced by a complex landscape of new alliances, political contestation and weaponized supply chains. For today's leaders, the challenge is no longer just managing growth — it's navigating a geopolitical boiling pot where strategic agility is the only way to survive. Understanding and identifying the key drivers of change within a complex international economic environment is now more critical than ever!

Book this Keynote Now!

Daniel Silke
Political Economy Analyst
& Keynote Speaker

South Africa's Critical Year: Surviving Domestic and Global Headwinds

Latest South African Conference Keynote

South Africa faces a crucial year. Can the country sustain and build on its more positive economic growth or will the volatility of the global environment - both politically and economically - impact policy and direction? Domestically, local government elections are likely to raise the political climate as the ANC attempts to claw back lost support amidst party divisions and apprehension ahead of 2029. The survival of the GNU will depend on these critical outcomes and will impact the country and business well into the future.

Book this Keynote Now!

Daniel Silke
Political Economy Analyst
& Keynote Speaker

The State of the Nation: South Africa's Political Economy - Can it Deliver?

Latest South African Keynote Presentation

At a pivotal moment for South Africa, with local elections looming, recovering infrastructure and global geopolitics influencing domestic outcomes, the key question is will the Government of National Unity endure and will it deliver the stability, reform and growth business needs? In this high-impact keynote, Daniel Silke provides a strategic and insightful overview on the pre-election political landscape, economic growth prospects, reform momentum, energy and logistics update, ANC succession battles and investor confidence while placing South Africa firmly within its global context. For organisations planning strategy sessions, conferences or client engagements, this combination political and economic keynote delivers the key intelligence required to navigate South Africa's evolving landscape from one of the country's leading authorities.

Book Now!

Daniel Silke

Political Economy Analyst
& Global Strategist